

Santa's Annual Visit to Providence House

A nearly 20-year tradition brings holiday magic to the babies and children staying in our Crisis Nurseries, creating special childhood memories they'll cherish once they're home.

The children at Providence House might not spend Christmas at home, but Santa always knows where to find them! Since 2007, a wonderful partnership with the Second District of Cleveland Police has ensured Old Saint Nick stops at our Crisis Nurseries, bringing holiday cheer and lots of smiles - and songs! - to our babies and children.

This treasured tradition began when our dear friend, Keith Sulzer, became Commander of the Second District and met our beloved founder, Sister Hope Greener, who shared with him our important mission of keeping kids safe and families together.

Since then, Keith brings Santa (his older brother Rich), Cleveland Police Officers, and community relations groups to visit our children each year - spreading joy, singing carols, listening to their holiday wishes, and helping them feel the love of our community.

"For Rich and I, visiting Providence House connects us to our family values, and our father, and his teaching us to give back to the community and maintain our commitment to always help those in need," said Keith. And their visits help remind our children that they're special, just like all of the children on Santa's list.

Success Story Dea, Evan, Harmony & Paige

Dea sought support from Providence House following a car accident to care for her children, 11-year-old Evan, 4-year-old Harmony, and 6-month-old Paige while she recovered from injuries and began physical therapy and outpatient mental health treatment. With limited parenting support and no childcare, she was unable to prioritize her own health and well-being.

Providence House provided a safe, nurturing environment for Evan, Harmony, and Paige, giving Dea the opportunity to focus on her health while knowing her children were safe and supported.

The children participated in a variety of enriching activities during their stay, including art, theater, and music programs, social-emotional learning, and yoga. They also enjoyed outings to local parks and restaurants. Paige made exciting developmental progress, including beginning to crawl, reaching for toys, showing more interest in books, and wanting to hold her own bottle during feedings.

With her children safely cared for, Dea was able to make meaningful progress toward her goals. She obtained part-time employment, secured childcare, began physical therapy, connected with a mental health provider for ongoing management, and her mental health symptoms improved.

Providence House also helped Dea build confidence in her parenting by helping create a chore and reward chart to use at home, and providing tools to reinforce positive behavior with her children.

When Dea welcomed her children home, she shared, “In a crisis situation, Providence House made my kids feel safe and welcomed. Thank you for all of the support and the smiles. You’ve helped make a difference for me and my family!”

Dea will be able to “shop” for holiday gifts for her children at Providence House, thanks to generous donations of new toys and clothing from the community. See more stories at provhouse.org/success

A Note From Natalie

Happy, Happy, Happiest Holiday Season! I hope you enjoyed our cover story about Santa's visits with our children over the past 20 years.

My 25th anniversary as CEO at Providence House is this year, and I can still remember Rich Sulzer's – the Singing Santa – first visit with our children. Rich was, and still is, so impressive in his Father Christmas costume.

Even more impressive is his joy in spending time with our children. Especially as they tug on his beard to make sure he is real!

But the real miracle of this enduring joyous and giving spirit is that Rich and Keith aren't the only ones. Every year, every month, every day, supporters like you have been with us through the years. Some we recall so fondly, who have passed on and remembered our children even in their estate plans, others who continue to give annually and even monthly to help us meet our mission and promise to keep children safe and families together.

We are so very grateful and honored to have such amazing and enduring supporters and champions that help us care for the babies and children whose families come to us for their safe haven. Your gifts have sustained us for over 45 years and for over 20,000 children that we have kept safe through each and every holiday and throughout each and every year.

Every year, children around the world anxiously await their visit from Santa. They write their wishes and dreams believing that they will be granted every holiday season. And for the children at Providence House, their wishes and dream are fulfilled – by you, each and every day, through your gifts to keep them safe, loved and cared for.

We know that Santa will come again this year to Providence House. And I hope it will be YOU. Through your gifts this holiday season and all year long.

Warmest wishes to you, and yours for peace and joy in 2027!

Natalie
